SPLIT STORIES
UNPACKING BLACK LIVES MATTER
FROM A MULTIRACIAL PERSPECTIVE

TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 1
3:00-4:30 PM

Charita Thompson is the Sr. Admission Counselor at the University of Colorado Denver, where she has worked the past 12 years in Student Affairs in Financial Aid, Scholarships, and Admissions. Charita is an Alum of CU Denver, where she completed her undergraduate on a full ride scholarship, and is currently pursuing her master’s degree in Education. Being a First Generation student herself, she is dedicated to the work of giving access to higher education for all students. When not at work, Charita stays busy with 2 very active little boys, and enjoys traveling.

Geneva Sarcedo is a PhD candidate and academic advisor in the School of Education and Human Development at University of Colorado Denver. She designed and taught the “Multiracial Families and Communities” course through Ethnic Studies at CU Denver in Fall 2019. Her research and professional interests in marginalized student success are grounded in her identities as a mixed women of color and mother.

Alma Ramos, pronouns she/he/hers, is a recent graduate from CU-Denver where she received her M.A. in Counseling with a concentration in Higher Education and Student Affairs. She is currently at the University of Colorado–Boulder, where she is the Diversity & Outreach Coordinator for the College of Music. Her professional work and interests revolve around how higher education institutions can better support and retain marginalized communities to achieve their highest level of success.

REGISTER AT
https://tinyurl.com/y5w7pfvt